KEYNOTE CHIEF ROBERT BURNS

Robert Burns is a retired Battalion Chief from the Fire Department of New York (FDNY). During his 37 year career he worked in various field commands throughout New York City including assignments as a Safety Chief, a Haz-Mat Chief, and an original member of the FDNY's Incident Management Team. Chief Burns' leadership training credentials include working as an adjunct instructor teaching leadership at John Jay College in New York City and heading the FDNY curriculum development group responsible for designing and delivering the leadership modules of the FDNY promotional training courses for lieutenants, captains, and battalion chiefs. He was the Director of the New York State First Line Supervisor's Training Program at the FDNY Fire Academy from 2007 until 2010, and currently conducts leadership training workshops for career and volunteer fire departments around the country.
